

QUO

To QUOTE. v. a. [quotere, Fr.] To cite an author or passage of an author; to adduce by way of authority or illustration the words of another.

The second chapter to the Romans is here quoted only to paint the margin.

St. Paul quotes one of their poets for this saying. Stillingfleet. He changed his mind, say the papers, and quote for it Melchior Adams and Hospinian.

He quoted texts right upon our Saviour, though he expounded them wrong. Atterbury. He will, in the middle of a session, quote passages out of Plato and Pindar.

Quoter. n. f. [from quote.] Citer; he that quotes. I proposed this passage entire, to take off the disguise which its quater put upon it.

Quoth. verb. imperfect. [this is only part of quodan, Saxon, retained in English, and is now only used in ludicrous language. It is used by Sidney irregularly in the second person.] Quoth I, say I or said I; quoth he, says he or said he.

Enjoying quoth you. Sidney, b. ii. Shall we, quoth he, so basely brook This paltry als. Hudibras.

QUO

QUOTIDIAN. adj. [quotidian, Fr. quotidianus, Latin.] Daily; happening every day.

Quotidian things, and equidistant hence Shut in for man in one circumference. Donne. Nor was this a short fit of shaking, as an ague, but a quotidian fever, always increasing to higher inflammation. King Charles.

QUOTIDIAN. n. f. [febris quotidiana, Lat.] A quotidian fever; a fever which returns every day. If I could meet that fancymonger, I would give him some good counsel; for he seems to have the quotidian of love. Shakespeare.

QUOTIENT. n. f. [quotient, Fr. quoties, Latin.] In arithmetick, quotient is the number produced by the division of the two given numbers the one by the other. Cocker.

To make all the steps belonging to the same pair of stairs of an equal height, they consider the height of the room in feet and inches, and multiply the feet by twelve, whose product, with the number of odd inches, gives the sum of the whole height in inches, which sum they divide by the number of steps they intend to have in that height, and the quotient shall be the number of inches and parts that each step shall be high. Moxon's Mechanical Exercises.

RAB

R, Is called the canine letter, because it is uttered with some resemblance to the growl or snarl of a cur: it has one constant found in English, such as it has in other languages; as red, rose, more, mutual: in words derived from the Greek, it is followed by an h, rhapsody: r is never mute, unless the second r may be accounted mute, where two rr are used; as myrrh.

To RA'BATE. v. n. [rabatre, Fr.] In falconry, to recover a hawk to the fist again. Ainsworth.

To RA'BRET. v. a. [rabatre, rabster, Fr.] To pare down pieces of wood so as to fit one another.

The rabbit plane is to cut part of the upper edge of a board straight or square down, that the edge of another board, cut down in the same manner, may join into the square of the first; and this lapping over of two boards is called rabbeting. Moxon's Mechanical Exercises.

The window frame hath every one of its lights rabbetted on its outside about half an inch into the frame, and all these rabbets, but that on the ground-sill, are grooved square. Moxon's Mechanical Exercises.

RA'BRET. n. f. [from the verb.] A joint made by paring two pieces so that they wrap over one another.

Having drove in the hooks, they set the rabbets of the door within the rabbets of the door-post. Moxon's Mechan. Exerc.

RA'BBIT. n. f. A doctor among the Jews.

The Hebrew rabbim say, that nature hath given man, for the pronouncing of all letters, the lips, the teeth, the tongue, the palate and throat. Camden's Remains.

Be not ye called rabbis; for one is your master, even Christ, and all ye are brethren. Mat. xxiii. 8.

RA'BBIT. n. f. [rabbie, rabbelin, Dutch.] A furry animal that lives on plants, and burrows in the ground. Mat. xxiii. 8.

I knew a wench married, as she went to the garden for partly to stuff a rabbit. Shakespeare, Taming of the Shrew.

A company of scholars, going to catch conies, carried one with them which had not much wit, and gave in charge, that if he saw any, he should be silent for fear of scaring of them; but he no sooner espied a company of rabbits, but he cried aloud, ecce multi coniculi; which he had no sooner said, but the conies ran to their burrows; and he being checked by them for it, answered, who would have thought that the rabbits understood Latin? Bacon's Apophthegms.

RA'BBLE. n. f. [proculus, Lat. rabulari, low Lat.] A tumultuous crowd; an assembly of low people.

Countrymen, will ye relent, and yield to mercy, Or let a rabble lead you to your deaths? Shakespeare.

Go bring the rabble here to this place. Shakespeare. Of these his several ravishments, betrayings, and stealing away of men's wives, came in all those ancient fables, and all that rabble of Grecian forgeries. Raleigh.

The better sort abhors icurility, And often censures what the rabble like. Rescrammon.

That profane, atheistical, epicurean rabble, whom the whole nation so rings of, are not the wisest men in the world. South's Sermons.

To gratify the barbarous audience, I gave them a short rabble scene, because the mob are represented by Plutarch and Polybius with the same character of baseness and cowardice. Dryden's Preface to Cleomenes.

In change of government, The rabble rule their great oppressors fate, Do sov'reign justice and revenge the state. Dryden.

His enemies have been only able to make ill impressions upon the low and ignorant rabble, and to put the dregs of the people in a ferment. Addison's Freeholder, N. 24.

RA'BLEMENT. n. f. [from rabble.] Crowd; tumultuous assembly of mean people.

A rude rabblement, Who's like he never saw, he durst not bide, But got his ready steed, and fast away 'gan ride. Fa. 2y.

R.

RAC

The rabblement houted, clapp'd their chopt hands, and uttered a deal of stinking breath. Shakespeare, Julius Caesar.

There will be always tyrants, murderers, thieves, traitors, and other of the same rabblement. Camden's Remains.

RA'BID. adj. [rabidus, Lat.] Fierce; furious; mad. Camden's Remains.

RA'BINET. n. f. A kind of smaller ordnance. Ainsworth.

RACE. n. f. [race, Fr. from radice, Lat.] 1. A family ascending.

2. Family descending.

He in a moment will create Another world; out of man, a race Of men innumerable, there to dwell. Milton.

Male he created thee, but thy consort Female for race. Milton.

High as the mother of the gods in place, And proud like her of an immortal race. Dryden.

Hence the long race of Alban fathers come. Dryden.

3. A generation; a collective family. A race of youthful and unhandled colts, Fetching mad bounds. Shakespeare, Merchant of Venice.

4. A particular breed. Instead Of spirits malign, a better race to bring Into their vacant room. Milton.

In the races of mankind and families of the world, there remains not to one above another the least pretence to have the right of inheritance. Locke.

5. RACE of ginger. [rayz de gengibre, Spanish.] A root or sprig of ginger. A particular strength or taste of wine, applied by Temple to any extraordinary natural force of intellect.

Of gardens there may be forms wholly irregular, that may have more beauty than of others; but they must owe it to some extraordinary dispositions of nature in the seat, or some great race of fancy or judgment in contrivance. Temple.

7. [Ras, Hindick.] Contest in running. To describe races and games

Or tilting furniture. Milton.

8. Course on the feet. The flight of many birds is swifter than the race of any beasts. Bacon.

9. Progress; course. It suddenly fell from an excess of favour, which many examples having taught them, never stooped his race till it came to a headlong overthrow. Sidney.

My race of glory run, and race of shame. Milton.

Their ministry perform'd, and race well run. Milton.

The great light of day yet wants to run Much of his race though steep. Milton.

He safe return'd, the race of glory past, New to his friends embrace. Pope's Odyssey.

10. Train; process. An offensive war is made, which is unjust in the aggressor; the prosecution and race of the war carrieth the defendant to invade the ancient patrimony of the first aggressor, who is now turned defendant; shall he sit down, and not put himself in defence? Bacon.

The race of this war fell upon the loss of Urbin, which he re-obtained. Bacon.

RA'CEHORSE. n. f. [race and horse.] Horse bred to run for prizes.

The reason Hudibras gives, why those, who can talk on trifles, speak with the greatest fluency, is, that the tongue is like a racehorse, which runs the faster the less weight it carries. Addison.

RACEMA'TION. n. f. [racemus, Lat.] Cluster, like that of grapes. A cock will in one day fertilize the whole racemation or cluster of eggs, which are not excluded in many weeks after. Brown's Vulgar Errors.

RACEMI'FEROUS. adj. [racemus and fero, Latin.] Bearing clusters. Brown's Vulgar Errors.

RA'CER.